Three months ago, a Seattle movement of anti-caste activists, Kshama Sawant's socialist Council office, and working people won the world's first ban on caste discrimination outside South Asia. This was a stunning victory against oppression, making global headlines and electrifying millions worldwide.

Seattle's new ordinance outlaws discrimination based on caste in both the public and private sectors, in employment, housing, and use of public places. But we know the courts under capitalism are not on the side of working people, so it's not enough just to have won this law—now we need to fight to enforce it.

We also want to help spread the victory, and win a ban on caste discrimination throughout Washington state!

And last but not least, we have heard that in addition to workers facing caste-based discrimination, there are many workers who face discrimination for being Muslim.

For all the above reasons, Councilmember Kshama Sawant's office will host a public hearing at Seattle City Hall on Thursday, September 21 at

600 4th Ave, Seattle, WA 98104-1822, United States
